ABOUT THE ARTIST

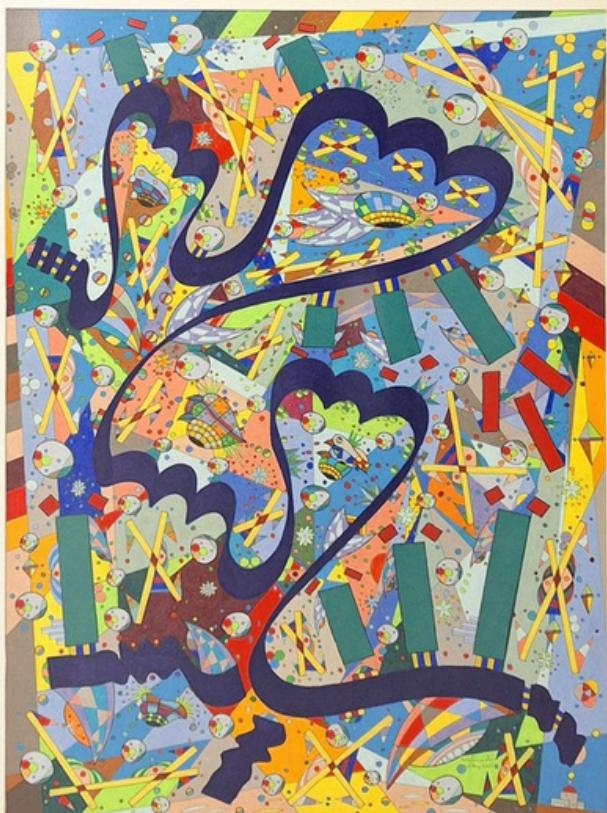

Dhammadika Gunasekera's practice is grounded in the pursuit of visual harmony, achieved through precise pencil strokes guided by intuition. Trained as an engineer, he brings a disciplined approach to constructing form and structure, while allowing emotion to steer each work towards an ambiguous and open-ended resolution.

Gunasekera employs a unique working method that does not begin with a predetermined narrative. His compositions emerge through an intuitive process in which form precedes meaning. Shapes, lines, and fields of colour are developed incrementally, allowing each work to resolve itself through internal balance rather than representation. This approach produces images that hover between abstraction and figuration, inviting sustained observation and personal interpretation.

Influenced by the theories of Wassily Kandinsky, Gunasekera approaches colour as an active force rather than a descriptive tool. Expanses of visual quiet are deliberately activated and balanced against areas of intensity. Harmony, rather than realism or symbolism, functions as the organising principle across his practice.

Working primarily with archival, lightfast coloured pencils on watercolour paper, Gunasekera employs a medium associated with control and durability. Through careful layering, he creates compositions whose complexity reveals itself only on close inspection, drawing viewers into an intimate and compelling encounter with the work.

Avoiding overt cultural or narrative symbols, Gunasekera's work resists rigid interpretation. Instead, it operates as a visually resonant platform that encourages viewers to form their own personal connections. Engineering Harmony: An Expression of Colour and Form reflects this ongoing inquiry, presenting works in which structure and intuition coexist, and where colour, form and vitality are held in careful equilibrium.
